BARELY CHEATS DEATH.

Handhold on Rail and Trained Muscle Hurls Six-Year-Old to Safety.

To the quick mind and athletic skill of Policeman Peter McClellan of the Hamburg avenue station, Brooklyn, six-year-old Ida Levy owes thanks that this was not her last day at school, as well as her first. McClellan saved the little girl's life this afternoon in a manner daring and thrilling.

Ida is the daughter of Wolf Levy, who lives at No. 1320 Broadway, Williamsburg. Clad in a new white dress, with her hair curled and a bouquet of flowers in her hand, she was taken to school for the first time this morning by her father. Levy went to the schoolhouse at noon to escort the girl home for lunch.

Ida was bubbling over with news about her experience. Her father held her hand until she reached Broadway and Decatur street. There she saw her mother waiting for her across the street. Utterly unable to restrain herself she broke loose from her father's grasp and started across Broadway like a little shot.

CHILD STOPS DIRECTLY IN THE PATH OF TROLLEY CAR.

An eastbound Broadway car was approaching. The mother shrieked to the child to turn back. The father stood on the sidewalk, transfixed with horror. And little Ida, confused by her mother's scream and the shouts of others, stepped right in the path of the approaching car.

Harry Howe, the motorman, shut off the power and wound the brake with all his might. But there are no air brakes on most Brooklyn trolley cars. The hand brakes do not count for much when a car is heavy. And even the rails are slippery. There was a chance in the world for Howe to stop the car before reaching the child on the track.

McClellan was riding on the front platform. He saw that the car could not be stopped. About fifteen feet remained to be covered for the culmination of a tragedy.

HERO EXHIBITED NERVE AND MUSC E 'N GREAT RESCUE.

Springing 'ver the railing of the platform, McLeellan got a foothold on the swaying, bumping fender. Holding to the top of the rail with his left hand, he reached forward with his right, grabbed Ida Levy by the arm and, with a mighty effort, tossed her out of arm's way. She landed, sitting down, three feet from the car tracks, while McLeellan, overbalanced, held on for dear life while the wheels of the car skidded and ground along for a few seconds.

The rescue was accomplished in a very short space of time, but time enough intervened to allow for all kinds of excitement. Mrs. Levy yelled screams that could be heard for blocks and Levy yelled from the other side of the street. Women screamed on the crowded car and boys and girls yelled as loudly as they could.

Ida Levy was uninjured. McClellan, blushing, received the thanks of the hysterical parents and hurried away. Mayor James Howe was unable to release the brakes without assistance he had sent them so hard.

Ida Levy did not go to school this afternoon, but she will be on hand tomorrow, thanks to the prompt action of McClellan, the cop.

Down off Ambrose Channel a south wind of about five knots met the sun

At 10:45, at 10 o'clock, the Atlantic gained two minutes on her rival at the start by clever jockeying.

Four miles from the start the Atlantic led by three minutes.

Nasa found the yachts still on the port tack, with the Atlantic leading by about four minutes. The wind was light and the monohumers had only covered eight miles of the course.

At 1:15 the yachts were abeam of Galilee, and the Atlantic had increased her lead to about seven minutes. The wind remained light from the south with the weather clearing.

Commissioner of Licenses After Consultation With the Mayor Notifies Film Makers That They Must Not Be Exhibited in New York.

POLICE WILL NOT PERMIT HER TO APPEAR ON STAGE.

This City, in Response to Protest of Evening World, Takes a Stand Against Capitalizing Crime.

The sordid and shameful life of seventeen-year-old Boulah Binford, whose association with Henry C. Beattie jr. was made known to the public in the course of his trial at Chesterfield, Va., for the murder of his wife, will not be exhibited for profit to New York audiences, whether in pictures or by the appearance of the girl on the stage in any part of the greater city.

After a consultation with Mayor Gaynor, just before his departure for the State Fair at Syracuse this afternoon, James G. Wallace, Commissioner of Licenses, sent the following letter to Isaac Levy, president of the company under whose management the Binford girl has been posing before moving picture cameras since her arrival in this city:

New York, Sept. 11, 1911,
Levy Company, Incorporated, 1560 Broadway.

Sir: I beg to inform you that any moving picture films or stereopticon views relating to the Beattie murder case, depicting any scene in connection therewith, or featuring any persons implicated therein, or who are depending for advertising on their connection with this gruesome tragedy, are condemned for the reason that they are unfit to be shown in places of public amusement

I hereby notify you that these films or pictures must under no circumstances be exhibited in your moving picture show or shows, under penalty of suspension or revocation of your license or licenses. Respectfully,

The same letter was sent to all the moving picture manufacturers and exhibitors.

This action of Mr. Wallace lines New York up with the score of more of other cities which responded to The Evening World's appeal to public sentiment to prevent the exploitation in moving picture theatres or before the footlights of the miserable example of the girl who after she was repudiated by Beattie on the witness stand had no hesitation in telling of her association with him, which began when she was thirteen years old.

In his application Levi said that the pictures of the woman whose notoriety came out of her friendship with Henry friendship with Henry Clay Beattie Jr., convicted of wife murder at Chesterfield Court House, Virginia, last week, were intended to earn a "moral lesson" and intended to carry a "moral lesson" to a warning to other young girls to shun temptation such as that to which she succumbed.

After the Mayor had gone Mr. Wallace gave out word that he would inform Levi, presumably at the Mayor's direction, that no license would be given for the display of the pictures anywhere in the Greater City and they must not be exhibited, no matter whether the intent was to convey a moral lesson or not.

The Mayor had a hurried conference with Police Commissioner Rhinelande Waide after Mr. Wallace left in a cab, and it was understood that Mr. Wallace, not to permit himself to be
